Book Review Process

Thank you for agreeing to review a book for Cartographica. The following guidelines have been developed to provide some focus and direction for all Cartographica book reviewers.

Some frequently asked questions have been included for your reference on page 3 of this document.

Cartographica uses a bilingual online peer-review system called ScholarOne Manuscripts where authors, peer reviewers, and book reviewers can submit articles, evaluations, and book reviews online. From initial submissions to finished proofs, ScholarOne streamlines the publication process to make it easy and effective for authors, reviewers, and editors alike. When your book review is ready for submission, you will submit it through the ScholarOne interface.

Review Format

The title of the review is the title of the book along with the name of the author(s).

In a separate paragraph please include the publisher (city, name of publisher, date of publication), Page count, Illustrations (if this is the case), ISBN, the price, and website (if available).

No longer than 750 words, inclusive of references.

Additional Elements for Submission

Please do not structure your review as a chapter by chapter analysis. Rather, write your comments and personal opinions about the book as a whole, highlighting particular areas of interest to illustrate your points. If you enjoyed the book, or thought the text was commendable, communicate your views in a way that will also make others want to read it.

Do not forget to indicate your full name, accreditation, and affiliation as this is published at the end of your review. Please include your e-mail address so that we can send page proofs directly to you, prior to publication.

Contact Information

Please complete all sections of the ScholarOne Manuscripts registration section.

Queries

Q: Should I focus my review on any particular areas of the book?

A: If you are reviewing a new edition of a book, it is a good idea to compare it with the previous version. The preface offers some guidance about what has been added, deleted, changed, as well as outlining any new research that has been included and whether the references have been updated.

If the book is illustrated, comment on the illustrations. Are they clear, do they relate well to the text? Does the index really fulfill its purpose?

Indicate the type of audience that would be interested in the book you are reviewing, such as students, teachers, researchers, or specialists.

Q: Do I have to read the whole book?

A: You do not have to read the whole book, but you may wish to do so for your own interest and for the benefit of a more detailed, accurate and informative review. Former reviewers advise the longer you wait to begin your review, the more difficult the task will become.

To get an overall perspective of the book take a good look at the book's table of contents and the chapter headings, read a few pages to sample the author's style, read a chapter on an area you know a great deal about, as well as a chapter you know less about to see whether it is explained clearly.

Q: Can I keep the book once I have completed my review?

A: Yes!

Q: What do I do if I feel the book is not worth reviewing?

A: On the rare occasion, a reviewer may feel the material is not worth reviewing (due to serious clinical errors, for example). If this is the case, please contact the book review editor (contact information below) to determine next steps. There is, of course, nothing wrong with writing a highly critical review especially if it points out factual errors in the book.

What is a DOI?

A DOI (Digital Object Identifier) is an article's unique identifier, registered with CrossRef and used to create a persistent link to the article – even if the article moves. (A journal might switch from one online hosting service to another, for example; the URL will change, but the DOI link will follow it.) A reader using the online version of an article's reference list can click on any DOI link to immediately get to the cited source; a reader using the print version can be sure of finding exactly the right article by searching the DOI instead of the author(s) or article title. Each of our online articles has its own DOI, which can be used to link back to it from other documents that cite it; including DOI links in our reference lists is the other end of that process (sort of like using recycled paper as well as recycling used paper). The more citations include DOIs, the more researchers will use them, which ultimately will drive more readers to our content.
